

Event: Orientation program for the freshers

Organized by: Department of Political Science

Date: July 20, 2019

Number of Participants: Department faculty and students attended the event

The Department of Political Science organized an orientation program for the first-year students on July 20, 2019. The purpose of the event was introducing the students with the department. Keeping this in mind, students were familiarized with the vision, purpose, objectives of department. The students were informed about the courses they are going to be study, how that course objectives/ program objectives will be delivered, and how the assessment process will be taking place. Apart from this, power point presentation was specifically used to help students understand their department well, covering all aspects, from its origin to the faculty details, a broader view of the department is presented to all the students.. All the faculty members attended the orientation and address the students in a warm and welcoming manner. As orientation is a practice which department has been following as a rigorous ritual, and this does helps students in getting the sense of their prospective teachers. The orientation also addressed the queries and concerns of the students as well. In this way, additionally it works as an ice breaking activity which enhanced the quality of engagement between students and teachers.
